Who Was the Goose?
If before beginning a sentence people would stop to see just how they are coming out, they would often put what they have to say into different words.
A lady had been looking for a friend for a long time without success. Finally she came upon him in an unexpected place.
"Well," she exclaimed, "I've been on a perfect wild goose chase all day long; but, thank goodness, I've found you at last."

A COLD SCENT.
An Indian Pup That Found a Six Year Old Trail.
Several enthusiastic con hunters recently were discussing "traps" called "chase" when "Hime" Wellman, of Urbana, came in, and in a few minutes was doing more con talk than all the balance of the crowd put together.
"I'll tell you," said "Hime." "I've got the best cold-trail on a con that ever anybody owned, and he is only eight months old, too! I took the pup out the other day just to see if he could run a track and to give him a little exercise, and he hadn't been in the woods ten minutes until I heard him bark, and he kept barking in such a way that I knew he had 'treed' his game; then I came to the conclusion that he was a 'still hunter.' I found him at the mouth of a six-inch ditch, and he had pulled out one of the tiles with his teeth and was chewing the end of it. As he was a young pup, I did not want him to ruin his teeth, and I pulled him away from the tile, but as soon as I let go of him he would jump back and tackle the thing with renewed vigor. I led him to the mouth of the ditch and stuck his nose at the end of the tile, but he paid no attention to that, but ran back to the other one.
"That sort of carrying on bothered me and I at last led the dog away, remarking that he was no good on earth. After awhile I turned him loose once more and in less than three minutes he was back at that tile, biting pieces out of it and barking like an old-timer. As I saw the pup was bound to ruin himself by breaking off his teeth, I picked up the tile, determined to carry it to the house, so as to keep it out of his reach. As I walked along looking at the marks of the pup's teeth I made a startling discovery, and what do you think it was?
"The spell-bound listeners to the strange story held their breath for a moment and in a chorus asked: "What?"
"Well, right on the inside of that tile I saw plainly the imprint of a con's foot, which had been made there when the tile had been first molded and the clay was soft and yielding. The tile had evidently been made late in the evening and set away to dry and the con had run through it the very same night and made the track of the con's foot, which was afterward dried and burned in the kiln, and it has been in that ditch for more than six years, and I say an eight-months-old pup that can smell as cold a trail as that is certainly the champion con dog of the world."—Wabash Times.

A Realistic Novelle.
Chapter I.—The young man who sat in the window of the eighteenth story of the Colossus building bled himself neatly on the window ledge and surveyed the edifying noonday throng beneath him. There was an air of elegance and self-poise about him that bespoke the man of leisure and refinement.
Suddenly he heard the mad clang of a bell down the street, and, with a sudden motion, turning to see a fire engine rushing up the crowded thoroughfare.
A second later a cry of horror arose from the street.
In his eagerness the young man had lost his balance and was falling with lightning speed to the street below.
Chapter II.—The faces of the thousands who saw the frightful leap were pale with terror as the young man's body striking a projecting sign in its flight, bounded far out toward the street.
Strong men wept and women turned their blanched faces aside.
With a horrible thud, the falling figure reached the granite pave midway in the street.
Chapter III.—But the thousands who rushed forward to see if a spark of life remained in the prostrate figure were suddenly held back.
The fire engine, with maddened steeds and heavy, rumbling wheels, was close at hand, and the young man's body striking the precipitous motion of the machine.
As well might he have stopped the ball at a cannon's mouth.
Almost before the crowd could know what had occurred, the flying engine had reached the prostrate form and passed directly over it.
Chapter IV.—Save for the low sobs of some anguished women and the muffled exclamations of horror from the men, the crowd was completely hushed.
Two of the bravest men in the awed assemblage sprang forward, together with a stout policeman, and stood above the form of the young man.
The policeman turned away with a sad face and started for the patrol box.
But ere he had taken two steps the figure on the pavement straightened out, and the young man rose, dusted his clothes off lightly with his handkerchief and started to walk away.
"Hold on," said the officer, "you're injured."
"I guess not," said the young man as he lit a cigarette. "I am a college football player."—Chicago Record.

Too Much for Beans.
"Haven't you got anything solid to eat?" said a traveller, discontentedly, eying the profusion of pies and small cakes on the counter of a restaurant at one of the way stations.
"I'll give you some beans," said the proprietor, with his most persuasive smile.
The traveller assented, and making short work of them, asked: "How much?"
"Twenty-five cents," was the bland response.
"What?" cried the traveller. "Twenty-five cents for a spoonful of cold beans?"
The proprietor continuing firm in his price, the man paid it and departed.
But late that afternoon a telegram was handed into the restaurant keeper, for which he paid twenty-five cents. It ran thus:
"Don't you think your price a little high on beans?"—Boston Journal.

Poor Richard's Almanac commanded $18 at the last sale.
Using the Water.
Governor—I gave you a glass of water to wet your sponge in.
Little Boy—I'm using it.
"But you are washing on the sponge."
"Yes'm, I drank the water so's to have it handy."—Good News.

THE WAITER'S MISTAKE.
He Has a Quaker Idea of a Wind-Up to a Good Dinner.
The waiter is the one imperturbable being on the face of the earth. No order can move him. He would probably look serenely unconscious of any incongruity in a breakfast order of black coffee and a dinner order of oatmeal and milk. The other evening he indicated anew his right to be considered the one impassive individual on earth.
They had eaten a leisurely dinner of several courses, and had finally come to the coffee. They ordered it, and then she hoped that she thought she would like some Delaware grapes. The waiter bowed and withdrew. In the course of time he returned with the coffee, but the grapes did not appear. After about twenty minutes, however, he entered the dining room bearing a plate with what he said before. They looked at it and at each other. Then they looked at the waiter.
"Beg pardon," said he. "Ain't everything all right?"
"Those," gasped the young woman, pointing to the platter, "are not Delaware grapes."
"Delaware grapes," echoed the waiter. Then he lifted the platter again. "Beg pardon," he said. "I understood you to order deviled crabs."—New York World.

After the Grip
Heart Palpitation, Dizziness, Numbness
Hood's Made a Decided Change.
"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass."
"Sirs:—Three years ago I had a severe attack of the grip, which left me weak and prostrated. I had heart difficulty, so common after this complaint, and would have palpitation and dizzy spells, after which I grew cold, numb and could not feel my pulse beat. I was also troubled with dyspepsia, and it was thought I could not recover. I could scarcely eat anything without sickness afterwards. I took many medicines, but felt no way relieved. I thought I was useless to try any more."
Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures
But being urged to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, I thought at last I would give it a trial. After using it a few days, I noticed a change in my health for the better, and have so rapidly recovered that I feel better than for several years."
